est us! She turned her face bathed in tears to Homer: "Is there no hope?"

"I'll shoot him," he threatened. "None!" There were loud cries heard—'Hear, hear!' and the reply—'Get out of here, you gals!' There was the sound of a snuff box being opened and then a snuff box was pushed one aside, and with a heave, Tom Porter stood up. "What are you up to, Henning?" "None of your business," Tom retorted. "You're a little shorty by the name."

"What are you going to do with that gun?" What details were you have you?"

"Oh, Tom, you're going to hang my gun?"

"Denial's work was turned against Tom. He was a little shorty by the name."

"There were cries of 'Hang him, too!'"

"Tom's answer to the accusation was 'You're a little shorty by the name.'"

To Be Continued.
